A TRAY FULL.

The sensible, reasoning person will take advantage of January to purchase a DIAMOND. There are obvious reasons. It is inventory time. Merchants have large bills to pay. Ready money counts more in this month than any other month in the year. We are shading of prices considerably. We have some very attractive diamonds from 1/2 carat up to 2 1/2 carats at prices that should interest you. The coming week we shall sell solid gold bracelets by weight, not by the piece as heretofore.

Childhood.
 I'M SICK of school and sick of home.
 An' so I've started out Across the western plains to roam
 And be a noble scout.
 Home ain't a bit ad-vent-u-rus, You can't have any fun,
 An' my'there'd be a fearful fuss, If I should get a gun.

An' so I've packed my haversack An' skiffled as I can,
 An' I ain't never comin' back 'Till I'm a famous man.
 'Till I have slayed a Indian chief An' shot a grizzly bear,
 An' maybe chased a cattle thief An' ketch'd him in his hair.

I guess I'm far away all right, An' awful hungry, too;
 It's awful dark outside tonight; I'm kinda scared, ain't you?
 I want my mama and my dad— It ain't no fun to roam;
 I'm just a 'tired little lad, Please, Mister, take me home!

MARTIN TIERNEY WEARS TITLE OF GRANDFATHER
 Street Commissioner Martin Tierney is the proudest man in Albuquerque today. It is not because of those eight little red wagons that are being pushed around the street, although the street commissioner is justly proud of said wagons. The cause for swelling pride in the street commissioner's heart has nothing to do with red wagons. For Mr. Tierney is a grandfather. The grandson was born last week to Mr. and Mrs. James Tierney at their home at Stamp, Ark., where Mr. Tierney is now general master mechanic for the Louisiana & Arkansas railroad. Mr. and Mrs. Tierney have hosts of friends in Albuquerque where they made their home for several years after their marriage. Mr. Tierney served his apprenticeship in the local railroad shops and since leaving Albuquerque has been climbing the railroad ladder rapidly in the mechanical department.

NEW YORK MOTHER LEFT BABY ON LIMITED
 Mrs. J. W. Hammond of New York had an experience yesterday afternoon, which probably will make her more careful in future as to her watchfulness over her ten-months-old baby and which she is not likely to forget very soon. Mrs. Hammond, a passenger on the eastbound limited, with her child, left the baby in the car while she went to the Harvey curio store to make some purchases. She delayed her going too long and came out of the store to see the train vanishing across Central avenue. Distracted, the mother rushed to Ticket Agent Olin, where her fears were soon quieted. The ticket agent could not bring the train back but he advised the conductor, the baby was left with proper guardians at Lamy and Mrs. Hammond went on to get it on train No. 8.
